11   TEAM BUILDING

Team building activities are stimulating, problem-solving tasks designed to help group members develop their capacity to work effectively together. Many team building and initiative tasks are similar to games, others are novel, complex tasks designed for specific needs. Team building activities are often used in meetings, presentations, workshops, training seminars, education programs, corporate training as well as in therapeutic and correctional settings. Team building exercises can be adapted for virtually any setting, and across cultures. Much depends on the role played by a facilitator, different team building activities, facilitated in different ways with different groups, can and will lead to a wide variety of different experiences and different outcomes. In the hands of an excellent facilitator, even the simplest game can become a significant experience for participants. An important part of team building exercises is participants' reflection and discussion about the activity, how they approached the situation, and possible results. Daniswara offers elaborate initiative tasks involving exercises lasting 2 to 8 hours. Contact us for detailed team building ideas.
